'Old Fashioned' Broom Does Job

Claude Elder, of the Spring Mills Community, appreciates the outdoors and Nature's bounty when it comes to making useful things. For instance, he makes old fashioned brooms of broom nage (like the one he's holding). Beside him is a 100 year old corn cutter which he lent to the Spring Mills Museum to display. Mr. Elder also enjoys making dogwood "rakes", to clear leaves and trash from lawns. He learned how to make utensils and implements from watching older people as he was growing up. He still does his planting with a horse and reports that his average price for darkleaf tobacco this past season was high enough to compare very well with farms using mechanized equipment. For those who want to know more about how things "used to be done", ask Claude Elder, a walking "reference book and a good neighbor", according to residents in the area.

Which Chick Laid Green Egg?

One of Mrs. Benny Guthrie's chickens laid an egg with pale green shell, "just a little late for St. Patrick's Day", says Mrs. Guthrie. She has just purchased some hens from Roy Warriner of Evergreen, so she doesn't know whether to give the credit to one of her chickens or one of the new arrivals. A check by telephone with Mrs. Annie Warriner reveals that none of the chickens there has ever laid a green egg. A certain type of South American chickens lays green eggs (Miss Ruby Adams of Red House has them) but whether the dark hens of the Warriner's are like these is a question to be answered later. Or to put it another way, that's what may keep our readers looking for further photos and news in each week's edition of the Times-Virginian.

Patrick Henry Boys School Anniversary

The Tenth Anniversary celebration of the establishment of Patrick Henry Boys Plantation has been set for May 15th. The Executive Board announced that the program would include entertainment beginning at 11 a.m. with a formal program beginning at 2 p.m.

Dr. James D. Hagood, President of the Boys Plantation also announced that the Honorable Mills E. Godwin, Jr. will be the principal speaker for the 2 p.m. program. He further indicated that additional parts of the program would be announced at later dates as they are confirmed.

The Plantation, which began it's service to homeless nondelinquent boys in the State of Virginia in 1961, now has 28 boys in residence which is the total capacity at this time. Future plans call for the construction of facilities to accommodate a total of 75 to 80 boys. It is hoped that much of this development can take place within the next decade since the need for the expansion of the program is so great. Officials of the Plantation estimate that they are only taking care of about 20 per cent of the needs for service being requested at the present time. At the same time, it is projected that the need for facilities for boys in need will continue to increase during the next decade making further growth even more imperative.

Acres Eligible For Assistance

Owners of small tracts of woodland are eligible for cost-sharing assistance in planting or improving a crop which will provide continuing public benefits in the form of improved watersheds, more recreational opportunities, and better ecological balance, as well as improving opportunity for long-term profit to owners.

"Under the Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP), the Government will share costs for planting forestry trees or shrubs or improving stands of forest trees," explained J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chairman of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

He said the REAP practices are applicable for farmland suitable for growing trees, primarily for production of forest products, such as lumber, pulpwood, posts, and the like. He also pointed out that the practices are meant to assist owners of small tracts.

Detailed information on REAP forestry practices and how to apply for cost-sharing may be obtained from the Appomattox County ASCS Office.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Revival services are in progress at Bethany Pentecostal Holiness Church Monday, March 22 through Sunday, March 28. The Reverend Tommy Fuqua, of Asheville, N.C., is the speaker with services each evening. Pastor of the local church is the Rev. Coyte Riley.
